House to finally drop convicted Mark Jimenez from its rolls

By Evelyn Flores

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES is expected to drop convicted Senator Mark Jimenez from its rolls after a long battle.

Jimenez was convicted of a crime in 1998, but the House has been unable to remove him from its rolls because of a procedural technicality.

The House is now expected to finally drop him from its rolls, which would mean he is no longer a senator.

Jimenez has been a controversial figure in the Senate, and his removal from the rolls would be a significant move.

The House is expected to vote on the matter soon, and the outcome is expected to be a relief for many.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The first session was a warm-up, the second was a cardiovascular workout, and the third was a strength training session. The results showed that the women who participated in the program experienced significant improvements in their physical and psychological health. Specifically, they showed a significant increase in their maximum heart rate, a significant decrease in their resting heart rate, and a significant increase in their maximum oxygen consumption. Additionally, they showed a significant decrease in their anxiety levels and a significant increase in their self-esteem. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can have a positive effect on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

As the authors state, we are working toward an understanding of the social and cultural context of the individual and the relationship between the two.

Appeals court upholds Alvarez vs Picop

By Rudy C. Sison

THE 123RD of Alvarez vs Picop was a landmark case in the history of the Philippine judicial system. The Supreme Court, in a 6-3 decision, upheld the lower court's ruling in favor of Alvarez, who was charged with the murder of Picop. The case was heard by the Supreme Court on October 1, 2011, and the decision was announced on October 13, 2011.

Justice Antonio Carpio, writing for the majority, said that the lower court's decision was "correctly reasoned and supported by the facts and law." He said that the lower court had found that Alvarez was the "principal" in the crime, while Picop was the "accomplice." The majority opinion was joined by Justices Sison, Reyes, and Dela Cruz.

Justice Peralta, writing for the dissent, said that the lower court's decision was "based on speculation and conjecture." He said that the lower court had not found sufficient evidence to prove that Alvarez was the principal in the crime. The dissenting opinion was joined by Justices Peralta and Torres.

The case was heard by the Supreme Court on October 1, 2011, and the decision was announced on October 13, 2011. The case was a landmark case in the history of the Philippine judicial system, as it was the first time that the Supreme Court had ruled in favor of a defendant in a murder case.

How should media cover threats to security?

How should the media cover threats to security? The answer is not simple. The media has a responsibility to inform the public about threats to security, but it also has a responsibility to protect the public from panic and fear.
